REFERENCE

Hostile Intelligence Services Threat and United States
Countermeasures [redacted] dated September 1986 (U)

25X1

1. The referenced study is the most recent in a series of annual assessments prepared in response to National Security Decision Directive 2 dated 12 January 1982. The assessments enable the National Security Council and the President to view the hostile intelligence threat broadly, especially the interaction of different hostile collection systems, and to develop and maintain an integrated counterintelligence and security countermeasures program. (C)

2. It is time now to initiate the process for producing the next national assessment. Attached are the draft terms of reference (TOR) and the proposed publication schedule for the 1987 version. Please review them and furnish comments to my office during the month of December. We would also appreciate your naming a point of contact to participate in a meeting on the draft TOR which we have scheduled for 1400 on 6 January 1987 in Room 1036 Ames Building, Rosslyn, Virginia. (U)

3. We have chosen a later cut-off date for this year's contributions to keep the information base for the final published assessment as current as possible. We would appreciate receiving portions of contributions which are not particularly time sensitive in advance of the cut-off date if at all possible. They can be updated in the drafting process, and early receipt will help us to keep to the publication schedule. (U)

TERMS OF REFERENCE FOR 1987 NATIONAL ASSESSMENT OF THE
HOSTILE INTELLIGENCE THREAT AND US COUNTERMEASURES

All contributions to this year's national assessment should be prepared as new statements that stand alone and provide complete, current, and accurate pictures of the subject addressed. They should not deal only with changes that have occurred since the previous assessment. Graphics may be included if they contribute to the clarity of the presentation.

As indicated on the schedule appended to these terms of reference, the cut-off date for information and inputs to the assessment is 1 June 1987. This should make the information used as the basis for this year's assessment as current as possible at the time of publication. Inputs can be updated throughout the drafting process. Early submissions would be very much appreciated.

An executive summary of the assessment will be published separately. It will contain principal findings and recommendations, as well as a status report on the implementation of the principal findings of the following two reports published in 1986: the President's Report to the Congress on the Nation's Counterintelligence and Security Countermeasures Plans, Programs, and Capabilities, dated September 1986; and the report of the Select Committee on Intelligence of the United States Senate (SSCI) entitled Meeting the Espionage Challenge: A Review of United States Counterintelligence and Security Programs, dated 7 October 1986.

I. OVERVIEW

A. Authority and Scope

This section will review the authority to conduct the assessment and describe the assessment's scope and purpose.

B. Previous Assessment, President's Report, and SSCI Report

Please report on the status of principal issues and problems highlighted in the previous assessment that apply to your organization. A status report on the concerns reflected in the reports by the President and the SSCI mentioned above will be compiled by this office. It will be based on inputs from the Interagency Group for Counterintelligence (IG/CI); the Interagency Group for Countermeasures (Policy) [IG/CM(P)]; and the Interagency Group for Countermeasures (Technical) [IG/CM(T)].

C. Principal Findings

This section will summarize the principal findings derived from the sections which follow. It will describe succinctly the foreign intelligence threat and measures taken or planned by US agencies with responsibilities in the areas of counterintelligence and/or security countermeasures to neutralize the activities of hostile intelligence services.
